

Miriam Käshammer:

Machine Translation

Machine translation is one of the oldest subfields of research in artificial intelligence. In this presentation, I will provide an introduction to machine translation and an overview of the approaches that are used to automatically translate text from one language to another, including statistical machine translation and neural machine translation. You will also learn about the use cases of machine translation at SAP.